ADOHTA is supportive of the Indigenous Dental Association of Australia (IDAA).

THE IDAA;

The Indigenous Dental Association Australia (IDAA), formerly Indigenous Dentists' Association Australia, is a not-for-profit professional association. We are the peak body for Indigenous dental health in Australia supporting First Nations Australian oral health students and practitioners. The IDAA welcomes to its membership all First Nations Australian dental practitioners including dentists, oral health therapists, hygienists and dental prosthetists.

The IDAA create opportunities for connection with Indigenous dental practitioners and students across the country. We want to make a real difference to improve oral health outcomes for Indigenous people throughout Australia, knowing that change will come with more of us working for this common goal together.

MEMBERSHIP of this Association is Free (eligibility applies);

1. Must be an Aboriginal or Torres Strait Island person
2. Must have graduated with a recognised dental degree or qualification

THE FIRST NATIONAL IDAA CONFERENCE will be held in collaboration with Indigenous Allied Health Australia (IAHA). IAHA will host their annual National Conference 28-30 November 2022 on the traditional lands of the Ngunnawal and Ngambri peoples in Canberra.

Why attend?

- Meet IDAA Directors and fellow members
- 3 CPD Points – plus more if attending the IAHA program
- Receive updates on oral health of First Nations People in Australia
- Become officially inducted into the IDAA
- Join us at the IAHA Gala Dinner on Tuesday 29 November
- Network with multiple Indigenous allied health professionals

ADOHTA IS SPONSORING up to 2 eligible members to attend the Inaugural IDAA Conference on Monday 28th November 2022 with $1000 each towards their travel and accommodation. Any additional expenses will be at your own cost. Cost of the IDAA Conference is free.
